

vhdl5_58 U96935703 Aluri USF EE

It decomposes the design into interconnected components like full adders and partial product generators to simulate the multiplication process. The architecture is designed to manage large bit-width operations (32x32), using logical building blocks that are efficient for hardware synthesis. This approach allows detailed testing and debugging of individual components, ensuring correctness and consistency with the behavioral model

